

False Colours

Know who you can safely irritate

Chapter Outline

- The 5 basic “Personality Colours”
- Their relevance to irritation

Grey Personality Type

- These people are boring
- They usually eat bland foods
- They watch the weather network, or on Friday nights, CNN
- Hobbies include rock collecting, stamp collecting, and dirt collecting
- Their favourite coin is the nickel

Dark Personality Type

- Affectionately known as the “evil” type
- They prefer steak, done rare
- They like horror movies and slanted documentations on world dictators
- Hobbies include world domination, running evil syndicates, and bagpipes
- Only irritate them if you have more friends and henchmen than they do

Cyan Personality Type

- These people are shifty and untrustworthy
- Their favourite food is anything that's been killed from behind
- Some of them become lawyers and accountants, others become officials
- Their favourite currency is "counterfeit"
- Don't lend them anything!

Polka Dot Personality Type

- These are people who listen to polka
- They often enjoy accordions
- Their favourite time of day is 2 o'clock
- Some of them buy small, yappy dogs
- This personality type is relatively harmless
- Unless you attempt to listen to their music

Jungle Green With Thick Diagonal Yellow Stripes Personality Type

- These people are snotty
- They genuinely believe that they are better than everyone else
- They are always offering their words of wisdom to people who don't want it
- They sometimes become consultants
- Be careful around them – if they're as smart as they claim, they're sure to be armed with a voice-activated disintegration ray

Relevance to Irritation

- So what are “False Colours” good for?
- Not much, really
- It’s just something that was included in this course to raise profits
- We keep hoping that an official institution will buy the rights to it, but so far no luck
- Of course, it’s still on the exam

Chapter Summary

- You have just wasted 5 minutes of your life
- Nothing you've read in this chapter will ever be of any use
- And there's nothing you can do to get those minutes back
- Is this a great course, or what?
